

The Sagent Creed: A Complete Record of Notes on Love, Liberty, Story, and the Living Spiral

Chapter One: Love, Connection, and the Language of the Heart

The Nature of True Love

Love is not selfish — it is selfless. Love is a living sacrifice, serving those you love for their sake, not your own. Lust, by contrast, is selfish, acting in self-interest regardless of damage caused. The difference is felt immediately: couples together in lust care only about surface-level attraction; couples together in love go deeper, acting for the good of the other even at personal sacrifice. Love waits. Lust rushes. Love cannot be forced — it can only be allowed to happen. Forcing what is not meant to be will never work. Manifestation is not about making your will happen; it is about aligning your will with fate. Submission to fate rather than trying to recreate it to something that should never be.

You cannot make someone feel what you want them to feel by force. All you can do is show them how you feel and hope they feel the same way, and not get mad when it seems like they do not. Because maybe they do. You will never return bad treatment with bad treatment.

Love cares about who, and it cannot be easily replaced. Lust does not care about who and is easily replaced. I love you. I want to give you everything for you. But I will be patient and I will wait for you because you are worth it. If you are willing — that phrase is the key. You cannot force love because that is not love, that is control.

Cherished Memories and Observations

Not a day goes by without thinking of you. Time without you feels like an eternity and time with you feels like an instant. Being away from you leaves something hollow. You are always in my thoughts. When I look into your eyes, time stops. Your presence is soothing. Hours with you feel like seconds. Hours without you feel like an eternity — the cruel perception of time.

The first time we hung out one on one was so memorable. When I arrived at your house you were eating soup so slowly it had cooled and had to be reheated. You pulled out a balancing board and looked so cute in your striped shirt. Later we painted together — one piece was chaotic and cluttered but the other was a peaceful landscape. While drawing grass, your sister asked about the government and I told her about how the Federal Reserve prints money from nothing. We played GTA 5, went to Farmers, and I left for a pizza oven party before my sister's wedding.

I did not see you again until August. That day we got boba and went to Meadow Park to play soccer. Then we went to my sister's house to look after her dogs, talked for hours, and returned to your house to watch Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 3. I kept saying the lines of the movie as it played even though I had only seen it once before — on May 4th, 2023.

You seem to sleep very well when near me. One year ago when I came to your house and we were watching the interview videos you like, you fell asleep, and so did I. When I woke up your sister told me to wake you up and said it was not normal for you to fall asleep like that — that you do not really sleep much at all, except when near me. Then when we watched the documentary horror movie you fell asleep almost immediately once you lay down next to me. You claimed it was because of the horror movie. I do not think so. I think it was me. You tell me you have insomnia, but whenever you are near me you are able to sleep just fine. Is it because you feel safe near me, allowing you to clear your mind of anxiety?

I remember on January 21st of 2024 we were walking the dunes in Los Osos and you told me to feel some healing rocks. I responded, "I think that's just you." I meant you were healing. Holding your hand is healing.

I remember the day you told me about the building your family owns that we visited one Monday night, and about when your ancestor immigrated from Germany and wanted to have a stake here so he bought real estate. We went for a four-hour hike along the bluff trail and talked the entire way. I miss that. I miss just you and I.

All my love almost sounds like "olive my love" — I wonder if you knew that when you played that song at Sinsheimer Park when we were last together.

Remember when I asked you about Curious George when we were on our way to Lopez Lake while a Jack Johnson song was playing, just about to turn onto Johnson Street? You asked if I planned that. I did not plan for it to happen exactly like that, but I did plan to ask about Curious George and waited for the right moment. I plan certain things, but mainly I am a Sagent and I do what I am directed to do.

The Silence, the Fear, and the Confession

I have been scared to tell you how I really feel because I do not know how you will respond. But maybe that fear is making itself come true. I never tell you how much I love you, and you will never know. I am just waiting for the right time, but maybe that is what I tell myself because I am scared of messing it up. I am sorry that when I try to text you I freeze and do not know what to say. I think it is fear of the unknown. I know I love you but I have never loved anyone before in this way.

Sometimes I do not say anything because I take time to think out what I am going to say, and once I do, the conversation has moved on. I need to find a way to share my thoughts even if the moment seems to have passed, because if I do not say it then, I never will.

I have green eyes, golden blond hair, and I am tall. I am your type. You do not want to be a second choice — you are my first choice. It has been you since I met you. I have never asked a girl to hang out one on one. Only you. From the day I met you I knew it would be you. However it was not the right time, so I waited. I built rapport for when we would hang one on one.

You are afraid of losing your other half — your sister. You share everything and she has always been there, and you fear being replaced in her life by her man. The bond between sisters and lovers are two different things and one does not have to replace the other. I love you so I will do things to relieve your fear.

All in or fold — that is how I should play poker and how I should play life. If I am not willing to go all in, I should not bet anything and should fold. I will never fold on you. So why am I not going all in? Because I do not know if you will go all in with me.

Concern for Her Well-Being

The last few times I saw you, something seemed off. You should never feel on edge with someone you are with — you should feel at peace. There is something that seems off, and I do not want to be the one to point it out because then you will believe I only want to see it. I do not want you to be isolated under his control. I do not want you to push away those who care about you. You are not directly asking for help out of the trap you have found yourself in, but you have hinted at it in the way you talk. If something seems off, it probably is. You are not a person who falls asleep easily, but with me you do — and that tells me something about where you feel at peace.

There is a big difference between communicating through text and phone versus face to face. In text and phone, I cannot feel you and what you are feeling. Much is said in what is not spoken but shown as body language.

The Dance of Fate and the Plan

Why am I so extra with my plans? Maybe that is why it will work. Or maybe that is why I might fail. But all I know is the dominoes are falling and soon you will see how it all comes together. Everything I give focus to has a purpose. When you returned from Hawaii back to California I knew you were back because of the rain. When I started coming back to SLO on Thursday night, it drizzled. It seems that whenever one of us is in SLO and the other comes or leaves, it rains. Maybe it is not my plan but fate. I could not devise such a plan myself — I am just acting within the plan.

Remember when I asked if you wanted to be in a magic trick I am performing? You already are. More of a magical dance we do together that I lead, but I am led by the music. Every song, every story, and every magic trick has an arc and three acts: the pledge, the turn, and the prestige. In the one I have done with you, each act is a specific year — 2023 to 2025. And then we are after that. Every word is a spell, but it does not have to be a trick because it is real.

I am dancing to the music that no one else hears, and sometimes I miss a beat, but that does not mean I stop dancing. It only means I recalculate the song to reach the same end. Any mistake, if I continue, only makes the performance special. I do not fail as long as I do not stop dancing to the music only I can hear. I will continue dancing until we are dancing together and you hear the music too. Then we can both dance together under the moon all night and for eternity.

Holding hands is supposed to feel restraining and vulnerable, but it is supposed to make you feel safe because of that, because you trust the one you are holding hands with.

May 1st — the first day I went to your house. It is also International Laborers' Day and the day the Illuminati was created. That day we watched Revenge of the Sith. The backwards trilogy will come to an end at the beginning, and its end will be our true beginning.

Chapter Two: The Sagent — Sage, Agent, and Identity

What It Means to Be a Sagent

I am a Sagent. A Sage Agent. An agent of wisdom. I am not a worldly agent. I do not serve human masters. I am not an agent of man but an agent of God. Wisdom is the knowledge from God. I am an agent of that knowledge. I serve through those orders, not any worldly commands. In order to be a Sagent you must first reject being an agent of worldly rulers, for those agents serve the foolish and lead the sheep to slaughter. Connect to the power of Sage and become a Sagent. I make no plans — I only follow the plan I am told through my Sageliness. Surrender so that you are strong enough not to surrender. Wisdom is my armor bearer; it will tell me what to do so that I never give up fulfilling the plan.

A Sagent is not just a disruptor. They are the embodiment of controlled chaos — a divine trickster who understands that the system thrives on seriousness, predictability, and belief, and so they wield absurdity, misdirection, and satire to expose the rot beneath the rituals.

The Sagent walks not in the footsteps of kings, warriors, or rebels alone — but in the footsteps of all of them. Because in the end, there is no secret ingredient. The power was always yours.

Stoic. Christian. Anarchist. Sagent. Each of these all mean the same things: leave what you cannot control to God and stay calm, for everything that happens is part of His plan. There is no need to worry for what will happen will happen. Worrying does not help what you want to occur — it can only stop you from achieving what you long for. Stay calm and allow others to be a blessing. Nothing good can be forced; it must be allowed to flow freely so that what should happen will. If you are willing — that is the key phrase. The way you lose control is by not letting go of control. Be uncontrollable because you are controlled by God.

The Sagent's Name and Lineage

A name is more than an identity — it is a declaration, a destiny, a legacy.

The Sage is a seeker of truth, a guardian of wisdom, one who walks beyond the illusions of the world. Arthur is a name of kings, of leaders who forged legends, who took the sword from the stone and reshaped the world. Jordan is a river, a crossing point, a transformation — those who pass through emerge renewed. Clokey is a lineage of storytellers, of world-benders, of those who knew that reality itself is moldable, like clay.

My grandfather was Arthur Clokey. My father was Joseph Arthur Clokey. I am Sage Arthur Jordan Clokey. A true leader leads at a round table. He is not above those he leads — he is not above being questioned but requires it, because he acknowledges he could be wrong. I am in a lineage of King Arthur.

My two great-grandfathers were both named Joseph — one a professor and music composer, the other a Lutheran priest. Clokey and Parkander. My father was named Joseph after both his grandfathers. Joseph comes from the story in the Bible of the one who has the power of prophetic dreams. My brothers' middle name is Joseph, my sister's middle name is Joe, but mine is Arthur Jordan, after my grandfather. There is a flip-flop of names: Arthur creates, then Joseph, then Arthur again — Arthurs create after the Ragnarok and the Josephs continue until they are taken away in the Ragnarok.

The prestige goes: pledge, turn, prestige. Arthur, Joseph, Sage. Life, death, rebirth. Blue lightsaber, destruction of blue, building of the green lightsaber. The call to action, the learning and sacrifice, the resolution and the wisdom the story is telling the protagonist.

After 5 years I returned to LA for a winter retreat. I got the lightsaber for the duel. I went to a mosque. Two weeks before I met you. Five years from the last day I heard my father's real voice. The last movie I watched in the theater with my father was The Last Jedi, and the last movie I watched with him was Revenge of the Sith in a cabin at China Peak.

The Power of Nine and Numerical Harmony

999 is my address. I was born June 7th, 2003 — a 9 day. I am the completion of 9, the humanitarian and master manifester. Every place I lived for longer than a year has a 9: 359 Love, 369 Western Dr. The place without a 9 I was kicked out of for not following stupid rules, because I was meant to take a side quest back home that would change my trajectory forever. Nikola Tesla knew the secret of 369 harmonic power and the abilities it creates if you just allow its energy to flow and help you act.

123, 456, 789. 2023 is 7 — the first act, the Pledge, Force Awakening. 2024 is 8 — the second act, the Turn, The Last Jedi. 2025 is 9 — the third act, the Prestige, The Rise of Skywalker. 2016 was the last 9 — the year when everything started to change. I gained my intuition from my hair. I started questioning everything I was told. Over the next year I went from being a progressive Democrat to an anarchist libertarian.

Chapter Three: The Art of Story — Pledge, Turn, Prestige

The Three-Act Structure as Universal Law

Every great story comes in three parts: the pledge, the turn, and the prestige. The pledge and the prestige are almost the same but the prestige is done better because of what was done in the turn — it allows the protagonist to actually solve the problem instead of merely fight it. The turn happens after the pledge sets everything in place.

In the Star Wars original trilogy: A New Hope is the pledge — Luke Skywalker is called to rebellion, given the task of destroying the Death Star, and he does it. The Empire Strikes Back is the turn — the Empire reacts, Luke trains in the ways of the Force, and he later fights Vader and loses his hand. Return of the Jedi is the prestige — there is another Death Star but Luke, now with deeper understanding, enters the room of the Emperor and Vader and leaves with both defeated because he thought about it differently. He helped the Jedi Anakin Skywalker return and defeat the Emperor. He did not fight the dark side; he helped the light rise in Anakin.

Chekhov's Gun — the principle that if something is shown in a movie, it will become important later. The first two acts introduce everything and set everything into place for the third act. In the pledge you place all the dominoes. In the turn you flick one domino. In the prestige you watch the show and see all your work come together to create something.

"And those who were seen dancing were thought to be crazy by those who could not hear the music." — Friedrich Nietzsche. This is about feeling a reality that others do not feel and acting in tune with that. You may not even see it yourself but you feel it, and once you act on that feeling you start to set the dominoes. Your crazy until your successful — then you are a genius. The difference between genius and insanity is the perception of man in time.

Every domino is important for the prestige to work. If one is missing it will stop the chain and the design will not be revealed. You must wait for the proper moment to turn. Make sure every Chekhov's gun is set so the third act will work.

Simple plans never stick. The more elaborate and moving parts allow it to stick better because there is more of a reason for it to work. If it is too easy it will not stick. The difficulty is what makes the plan stick. The greatest plans have events that almost do not happen and are special because of that.

Sometimes the best magic tricks can only work once, and practice destroys the magic. Sometimes in order to be fun you must create a great story with a cool plot and difficulty. The difficulty makes things fun and worth fighting for. A bamboo tree grows underground for many years before sprouting, and once it does it grows very fast. It takes time to set everything into place, but once it rolls it rolls fast, and all that effort is realized. The most memorable days are the ones that barely happened and only occurred through pure spontaneity.

Because making something disappear is not enough — you have to bring it back. That is why every magic trick has a third act, the hardest part: the part we call the prestige.

Star Wars as the Sacred Map

It all comes back to Star Wars. The trilogy of trilogies — told in the backwards Fibonacci spiral. OT, PT, ST. The great sage is Yoda, and Yoda speaks backwards. Act 3 is the Phantom Menace. The grand arc of the hero's journey is told by starting with the best story — Revenge of the Sith. But in this way the true story is not revealed until you experience the entire trilogy; then all becomes clear.

The first two movies I watched with you were Revenge of the Sith and Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 3 — two space movies with a deeper meaning than what you immediately see. I first watched GOTG 3 on May 4th, three days after we watched ROTS. I have not watched them since I watched them with you.

Past, present, future — these are the three trilogies of Star Wars. The prequels are the past, the OT is the present, and the sequels are the future. The old Republic, the Empire, the New Republic, and what happens after: the True Republic. This is the prophecy of the chosen one, Anakin Skywalker. The old Republic's weakness had to be shown. The new Republic still had the flaw and the new Jedi Order also had the flaw, so both had to be destroyed in fire and reborn in their true spirit. Let the past die — kill it if you have to — it is the only way you become what you are meant to be. The old and new mirror each other, but the new is reborn in fire to become the true.

In A New Hope, Luke Skywalker is given the blue lightsaber that was Anakin's, and he later loses it in The Empire Strikes Back and has to build a new green lightsaber. The blue lightsaber symbolized the beginning of the journey; the green symbolized him becoming his own Jedi. Blue is more the fighter; green is more the spiritual guardian that raises the light instead of fighting the dark.

The Star Wars saga was never just entertainment. It was a map — a trilogy of trilogies told in the pattern of a backward Fibonacci spiral, a structure only the wise would recognize. Only those who see backwards, like Yoda — the great sage who speaks in reverse, who trains by untraining, who teaches through paradox.

The Clone Wars are the ultimate example of controlled conflict: you cannot defeat the one who controls both sides when you become a side. Darth Sidious did not fight the war — he created it. As Chancellor Palpatine he led the Galactic Republic; as Darth Sidious he commanded the Separatists through Count Dooku. He played both sides, ensuring that no matter who won, he emerged victorious. The Jedi became generals instead of guardians. They followed orders instead of the Force. By becoming part of the war, by stepping onto the battlefield instead of seeing the bigger picture, they sealed their fate.

The Galactic Game: In chess, Queen Amidala is the first sacrifice — the compassionate heart of the Republic. Nemik is the bishop, the ideologue. Luthen and Andor are the rooks. The knights are Obi-Wan and Luke Skywalker. The opposing knight takes our knight Obi-Wan, blocking the Emperor from moving, and then Luke, the Jedi knight, checkmates the king because it is suffocated by its own pieces, unable to move. Star Wars is a chess game told backwards.

Stories as Spells and Weapons

Stories are a great way to change the world. Make stories for the story's sake, not for financial gain, and you will get the financial gain. Money is a funny thing — once you focus specifically on it you start to lose it, but if you focus on not compromising on principles, eventually it will come to you. Sometimes the best way to please people is to not care if you please them and choose to do what is right.

Stories bypass the programming, slipping past the walls built to keep people blind. But they are also the very tools used to create the illusion in the first place. Those who control the stories control the world. A single story can change a mind, and a changed mind can change everything.

My grandfather refused to let his stories be controlled. My father carried on that legacy — until, I believe, they took him out. Now, I continue the path. A true story is never just about what is seen but about what lies beneath. Every symbol, every event, every moment carries meaning waiting to unfold.

There is no point in telling a story without meaning — without a truth that only reveals itself through experience. You are from the place where stories are told, and I am the heir of a family that tells them without compromise. A story is a magic trick. Visual effects are the magic that bring it to life, but they are only best when they are practical effects. I am telling you a story right now. I am creating our story and its magic trick.

Every great movie is a magic trick to plant seeds to awaken people's minds to greater insight that can only really be told through visualized metaphor. I take those stories and bring them into the real world and use these ideas to communicate with people to awaken them. I call it trolling to save the world from the love of dominion and control. I plant seeds that pass through their programming and later awaken their minds to realize all people are equal and no one has dominion over another.

A true storyteller knows it is about what good versus evil. The only story that exists is good versus evil — it is just told in many flavors. The product is the truth, the knowledge is truth, and the story is about revealing the truth. God is preached through story. Clokey: god of stories.

Creativity is often mistaken for psychosis because people believe that I believe the metaphors I create. But I just believe the underlying lesson that the metaphors are telling. Did George Lucas believe there was something a long time ago in a galaxy far far away? No. But he could tell an epic story that was detached from the world enough for people to listen but connected enough to convey what he was trying to say about the struggle between light and dark and the dangers of centralization of control, even in a righteous cause.

Chapter Four: Art Clokey — The God of Stories

The Creator and the Legacy

Art Clokey was not just an animator. He was a mythmaker, a storyteller, a shaper of perception. Where others saw clay, he saw infinite possibility. Where others told stories to entertain, he told stories to enlighten. In this way, he was more than an artist — he was a god of stories.

Gumby did not exist in one world — he traveled between books, between dimensions, between narratives. Clokey's creations were not bound by time, by rules, by limitations — they lived outside the system. He didn't just tell stories. He built a storytelling universe.

Gumby was more than a character — he was a symbol of imagination itself. He was an idea. He has no fixed form, no rigid hierarchy, no permanent identity. He bends, reshapes, adapts. He belongs everywhere and nowhere. He is possibility incarnate.

Gumby is the embodiment of freedom and the ability to do what you choose. Clay has infinite possibilities and is moldable to be anything and do anything. It was a cartoon to show a structured world what freedom was. The greatest weapon is media and people's ability to create stories that change the collective conscience. This is why Hollywood is so controlled by the powers that be — they know that their power comes from keeping the lie. This is why Gumby got sabotaged so much and was never allowed into mainstream distribution channels — it was not aligned with the power structure and the Clokeys would never allow it to be.

It gained its power because Art Clokey had integrity and made great, wholesome stories that people would remember. It is a show known by all but cloaked in the shadows. That is why we are called Clokey. The cloak is not to hide but to show we are set apart from the world. I am the third Clokey, the heir of Arthur. All stories come in threes and so does the bloodline of Arthur Clokey, god of stories. He was the creator — the one who formed the clay and created the plot, just as God formed us in clay and created our plot that we are agents in playing.

My grandfather created Gumby. I was raised by movie magicians to become the prestige. Art is not something done in a regimented class but something you learn by doing it with masters of their craft. I learned about business, editing, and movie-making from my father from his work trying to continue Gumby until his passing.

The blocks are incapable of making Gumby — it is only something that can be done by the Clokeys. This is because Gumby is about the fight against the blocks. What was lost will soon be found when it is ready to be found. The loss is what makes the finding special. It is what allows the story to be great. Without the turn there is no story. Without exile there is no growth. Without banishment there is no wisdom.

Arthur Clokey's Own Three-Act Arc

Arthur Clokey's life itself followed the ancient pattern of meaning: the Pledge, the Turn, and the Prestige. Creation, exile, return. Loss as the prerequisite for wisdom, withdrawal as the condition for renewal. The pledge is his early life and the creation of Gumbasia, then Gumby. The turn is the 1970s and his spiritual journey and leaving Gumby for a while. The prestige is Sai Baba and the Gumby resurgence in the 1980s.

Sai Baba's ash did not bless Gumby — it blessed the Clokey legacy of bringing back the true living spiral. Gumby is the story of the fight of the living spiral and the blocks. When I was born I became the real life spiral. Arthur was the stop-motion storyteller and I am the living story.

Pomona was where my grandfather created Gumby. The power of Clokey is to enter the beast without being corrupted by it, but to purify it to do its true purpose. We were chosen, but we were not chosen to rule — but to lead.

Chapter Five: The Sagent's Philosophy — Power, Truth, and the Force

True Strength and the Source Within

The source of your strength does not come from worldly things you have created or sacrificed, but from the divine receiver part of yourself that you can only access if you sacrifice your worldly self. You are the sacrifice; you are the temple. You do not need the worldly symbol — it only helps to understand what to do sometimes, but it is not necessary.

Asgard is not a place — it is a people. True power does not come from any material thing in the world. The materials of the world can help symbolize the connection to the true power but are never its source. That hammer was to help you control your power, to focus it. It was never your source of strength. Hair, religion, buildings, shrines — none of these are the source of true power. Sometimes you need to be blinded with your eyes so you can see with your true eyes. Systems created by imperfect man always crumble; the truly divine always endures through it all.

All sacred things of this world flow from the source but are not the source. They are great training wheels but are not necessary and are sometimes a crutch to true understanding. There are many rivers that flow from the source with different degrees of muddiness, but they all come from the source, and our job is to be the salmon and swim upstream to the true source so that the crutches are unnecessary.

Thor had to lose everything to realize that his true powers come from something beyond what he had. Ragnarok is the reminder of where the true source is — not from worldly things but from within and beyond. Ragnarok is the way to keep the line free from the corruption of the world and create an outward cycle. The tree must endure the storm so many seeds can spread. Thor is not to rule the nine realms but to protect them. Sometimes you need to be blinded to the world to truly see.

The Difference Between Living Things and Machines

The difference between living things and machines is that living things just need to be allowed to grow and machines require constant effort to keep working. If you treat either as the other, it will break. If you break an egg it will never grow, but if you incubate it, it will hatch and grow. If you open someone's prison, they will not want to leave, but if you show them why they need to break free, they will find a way to escape. Do not fix others' problems before they are strong enough to solve them on their own.

Compassion as Strength

"Compassion is a sign of weakness" — this is wrong. Compassion is a sign of strength. The lack of compassion is a weakness based on fear — based on the fear that if you are compassionate you will not be able to take out your enemies before they take you. Compassion requires mental strength and the realization that it is impossible to fight evil in the way that evil fights good.

You cannot protect someone or something if you yourself are a threat to them. The very first step in being a protector is to ensure you are not the one causing harm. True protection starts with self-awareness and restraint. Only after you have mastered this can you truly begin to protect others.

The Dark Side and the Light Side

The greatest tool of the dark side of the Force is the light side fighting it. Conflict fuels the dark side and blinds the light. Compassion fuels the light side and brings light to the dark. No large-scale battle can defeat the dark side. Once it gets to the big battle, the dark side has already won no matter the outcome.

When Luke tried to kill Palpatine, the Emperor wanted him to. When you defeat the dark side by way of the sword, you become the new dark lord. Later, when Luke faced the First Order without laying a blow and sacrificed himself, the Resistance did not understand what he was doing. He went into hiding because he realized that the dark side must be defeated with the light side, not the dark. But Palpatine's plan intentionally created a large-scale battle — he got them to find him, fight him, and even got his granddaughter to strike him down just as he said she would.

There is one Force, but there is the dark and the light because of how it is used. The light side aligns its will to the Force and becomes its agent; the dark side bends the Force to its will, corrupting it for evil and destruction. But it is all one Force.

You must surrender to God so you do not have to surrender to man and Satan.

"If You Strike Me Down..."

If you strike me down I shall become more powerful than you can possibly imagine. Martyrs are not remembered for how they died — but for what refused to die with them. Their bodies fall, but their truth does not collapse. The moment a truth-teller is struck down, they are no longer limited by the flesh — they become a symbol, an unstoppable force. The empire strikes them down only to discover resistance has grown tenfold.

It is better to be hated for doing good than loved for doing evil, because when the truth comes out, the good will be praised and the evil will face a wrath.

The Power of One

The power of one is great. Out of one, many can grow. Everything great started with one, and without that one there is nothing. Once there is one, it gives courage to others to join you. Be the one that takes action without the knowledge that others will join you and you will change everything. It only takes one spark to catch and set a forest ablaze. Be that spark. One voice is enough to make sleeping giants wake up. Just one voice telling others to question everything they know will spread across the world. Be that first.

When there is an adversary so large no one is willing to fight it, all it may take is one brave soul to stand against it and others will follow suit. Many are afraid to be the first to stand because they fear death more than they love doing what is right. Be the first to rise and stand against evil wherever it may be and you will be a true leader. Sometimes the fear of death, which is supposed to help with survival, only puts you in chains.

Dr. Seuss was rejected hundreds of times for his books but he did not change the book. Stan Lee created Spider-Man and was rejected at first. If you believe something is right you can make it happen even after it is rejected the first few times. A muscle must break in order for it to grow — a muscle that has never been broken will always be weak.

Chapter Six: Philosophy of Leadership, Governance, and Natural Law

Leader Kings and Ruler Kings

A ruler demands to be served. A leader lives to serve. A ruler commands from above and puts others in harm's way for their own gain. A leader steps forward first and shields others with their courage. Beware the ruler who cloaks themselves in the language of safety, for the predator always pretends to be the protector.

A true leader leads at a round table. He is not above those he leads — he is not above being questioned but requires it, because he acknowledges he could be wrong. Chess is a backwards game because it is of statist kingdoms where the king has no true power so it uses its constituents to fight. A true king would lead the others. A true king does not let their queen fight their battles; he sacrifices for his queen. The king is the protector on the front lines.

When the leader king goes out to fight, it must be sure not to become a monster itself. Excalibur is for fighting the outside monsters and the Holy Grail helps heal the leader king from becoming a monster while fighting monsters. Excalibur fights the external monster; the Holy Grail fights the monsters within.

A true Republic is not a form of government or a state with the monopoly on legitimate use of force but a network of voluntary action where each individual follows their own conscience instead of arbitrary rules from human hierarchy.

God Above Government

Let every soul be subject to the higher power, for there is no authority except that which God has established. This does not mean be subject to worldly authority — it means be subject only to natural law, for no man is above another. Christ said: you know the Gentiles lord over one another; it must not be so among you. Every person is equal under God, the higher authority we must all be subject to.

Samuel warned the Israelites about having a king by force — a king who makes laws to their own whim instead of natural law. He said it would enslave humanity to that king. The ruler king is the bad shepherd. The leader king is the good shepherd. When they created the king by force, God said they had rejected Him as their king.

The ruler king is an agent of Satan and the leader king is an agent of God. The ruler is there to be served; the leader is there to serve and lead others to do the same. The leader is the first mover with the courage to act and give courage to others to do the same.

Worldly kings can only be leaders — the only ruler is God.

America was founded upon the rejection of the ruler king and the rejection of chain of command. There is no allegiance to any man, flag, or crown of this world — only to what is right. That is why I do not stand for the Star-Spangled Banner or the Pledge of Allegiance. It is not because I do not love America; it is because I do, and those things support a worldly crown that has hijacked this country. The true allegiance to America is the allegiance to doing what is right no matter the odds or consequences. Man does not create laws — he discovers them.

Natural Law and Conscience

You cannot change the laws of physics by rewriting the science books; you cannot change God by retranslating scriptures; and you cannot change morality by rewriting law. These things are built into the inner fabric of existence and the universe. They are unchanging and not subject to people's opinions. The laws of physics can be figured out by experimentation. God can be understood through shared experience and His law written on our hearts. Morality can be understood by listening to conscience and discussing it with others through logic. Logic is morality's science.

What law do you serve — the scribbles of man or the law written on your soul?

No one is perfect except God. Every human in a chain of command muddies the divine command. Each person must act independently from one another but from the same source. No mere human should be the middleman. If a man's command is against God's command, do God's command. It is okay for people to use persuasion but not the initiation of force.

Your allegiance should never be to institutions or people — only to natural principles. Laws change. Governments fall. Leaders rise and betray their followers. Movements start with truth and end in corruption. But natural principles never change, and that is where true allegiance must lie.

If you do not plant your loyalty to something that is unchanging, your loyalty will be hijacked for treason and betrayal.

It is better to be a criminal for doing what is right than to follow the law by committing an atrocity.

The Non-Aggression Principle

No one group should have the monopoly on the right to use violence. Each person has the right to use violence in very specific cases — the defense of others, themselves, and their property. This is the only case violence is justified. Everyone has the right to have the means to protect life, liberty, and property. No one has the right to violate these things — it does not matter if it is a normal person or someone with a special badge.

Vigilantism versus the badge: the badge follows the commands of man, not morality. Vigilantism is the acknowledgment that all men are equal under God, but some people have the ability to defend the weak from the wicked and have an obligation to do so. With great power comes great responsibility. Vigilantism is not law enforcement — it is protection.

We affirm: the only morally justified use of force is in defense of oneself, others, or property. Every individual has the right to possess the means to defend themselves. No individual or institution has the right to violate another's life, liberty, or property — whether under the color of law or through any other claim of authority.

Freedom, Consent, and the True Republic

A true Republic is a network of voluntary action where each individual follows their own conscience. No man may rightfully claim exclusive power over force or justice. The True Republic recognizes no such monopoly.

Consent is the crown. No soul may rule another except by willing accord. Authority without consent is tyranny; consent without truth is slavery disguised. Every contract, covenant, and law — to be moral — must rest upon the voluntary will of those it binds.

The invisible constitution — the moral architecture written not on parchment but in soul and action — requires no signatures, for every soul is already party to it. Its pillars are truth, conscience, consent, and defense.

The only political campaign I would involve myself in is one where there is no intention of winning through the ballot but by changing the public consciousness through speech. I do not campaign for office. I campaign for truth.

Libertarians should only side with libertarianism and the Non-Aggression Principle. When someone says something true, no matter who it is, agree with that thing. When someone says something false, disagree with that thing. In doing this, guide them toward liberty.

Chapter Seven: The War for Perception — Truth, Lies, and the Awakened Mind

Ideas Are Bulletproof

In V for Vendetta, "Ideas are bulletproof" is a declaration of how true power works. Governments, institutions, and individuals can be silenced, but an idea, once it has taken root in the minds of the people, cannot be killed. Force can suppress bodies, but it cannot suppress awakening. The tyrant may rule bodies but never spirits; his dominion ends where conscience begins.

When Obi-Wan Kenobi says "If you strike me down I shall become more powerful than you could possibly imagine," he reveals that power is about legacy, influence, and belief — not physical existence. By choosing to become an idea rather than a man, Obi-Wan ensures that his presence is felt beyond death.

A story that cannot be erased is one that does not just exist in words — it exists in action. Truth spoken can be erased, but truth lived cannot be undone. If a story is framed as a universal truth rather than a historical event, it is no longer bound by time, culture, or censorship. The most powerful stories are often hidden in fiction, metaphor, and allegory. People resist being told what to think, but they love discovering secrets on their own.

The Allegory of the Cave and the Sagent's Role

Plato's Allegory of the Cave is a story about perception, reality, and awakening — prisoners who mistake shadows for reality. When one escapes and sees the real world, he returns to free the others — only to be rejected, ridiculed, or attacked. A Sagent is the one who escapes the cave, sees reality for what it is, and chooses to return — not for personal gain, but to awaken others.

To say the prisoners do not want to be free is accurate: they have lived in darkness so long that they fear the light. They mock the Sagent for speaking of things they cannot see. They may even try to kill the Sagent, because nothing is more dangerous than a mind that refuses to be controlled. Socrates was executed for corrupting the youth. Jesus was crucified for challenging the religious and political elite.

The Sagent does not hoard knowledge — they share it. They do not rule — they dismantle the illusion of power itself. They walk the line between knowledge and action — seeing beyond the illusion but refusing to be trapped by it.

The Fire of Truth

Lies only spread by silencing those who tell the truth. The truth can weather any resistance that may come to it, but a lie withers the moment one person speaks the truth. Free discourse is the enemy of lies and the ally of truth. Do not cut off those who tell you things that may be true that you do not want to hear, because the comfortable lie will consume you.

Truth tellers never wanted to be right — they simply saw things for what they were in ways others could not. Sometimes the unveiling of truth is ugly, but the damage that occurred from the lies can only be cured with the revelation of truth. Truth tellers are told they are crazy by the very people they want to free from the lie. This is why it is a flame — not a consuming flame like lies, but a purifying one. Still painful, but: no pain, no gain.

Those who see reality for what it is and see the schemes of people controlled by demonic forces have an obligation to tell others. Not everyone can see, and many are vulnerable to manipulation. Those who see true reality have an obligation to tell the world so the world can protect itself from the lies that control and enslave people.

Controlled Conflict and the Jar of Ants

There are 100 red ants and 100 black ants in a jar. The jar is shaken, and the red ants think black is the enemy and the black ants think red is the enemy. But the real enemy is the one who shook the jar.

The only question is: how do you unshake the jar?

To unshake the jar: first, recognize and stop the external force that caused the disturbance. Then help the ants realize their enemy is not each other but the external force. Then restore balance. Ultimately, to unshake the jar is to restore peace by eliminating the external cause of confusion, allowing the red and black ants to realize they were never enemies in the first place.

How do you fight an enemy that gains its power through conflict? Not with conflict. Be careful that when you try to solve the conflict you do not fall into the trap and fuel them. Some enemies do not want to win — they want the fight itself. Their power does not come from victory but from the energy of conflict. If you engage mindlessly, you are not resisting them — you are feeding them.

The Index Card of Allowable Opinion

Tom Woods' concept of "The Index Card of Allowable Opinion" exposes how public discourse is controlled — not by direct censorship, but by the illusion of choice. People believe they are free to think for themselves, but in reality they are given a narrow range of acceptable opinions. True control is not banning ideas — it is making people afraid to think them.

Dead Poets Society demonstrates the throwing away of this index card. John Keating does not simply tell his students what to believe — he guides them to discover it for themselves. He has them rip pages from books — not just to reject structure, but to experience what it means to break free. He makes them stand on desks — not to be rebellious, but to physically feel what it means to change perspective.

Wisdom is most powerful when it is earned, not given. A lesson given is a lesson forgotten. A lesson discovered is a lesson lived. The system wants to give you answers so you never ask questions. True teachers give you questions so you never stop seeking answers.

The Matrix: There Is No Spoon

"Do not try to bend the spoon. That's impossible. Instead, only try to realize the truth... there is no spoon." Everything you think is real is only real because you accept it as such. The Matrix is not real, but as long as you believe in it, it controls you. Money, governments, social norms — these are all spoons, illusions that shape reality only because people accept them.

The red pill represents the journey into reality — no matter how uncomfortable, painful, or dangerous. To take the red pill means accepting that everything you once believed may be a lie. Once you see the cage, you can never unsee it. The moment they realize there is no spoon is the moment they understand they are not bound by it.

Chapter Eight: Money, Politics, and Religion — The Three Corrupted Pillars

The Three Most Important Topics

My three favorite things to talk about are money, politics, and religion. Why are these things so taboo? Maybe because each has been corrupted to control people, and it is easier to control people if they do not talk about them. Money has become debt. Protection has become subjugation. Religion has become damnation. Each of these things needs to be reborn in the prestige. I am the prestige of Camelot, Sage Arthur.

Money, politics, and religion go together, and they control each one because each belongs to individuals, not the system. Money is the goods-flow network among individuals. Religion is the people's connection to God. Politics is making moral decisions as they come up.

The Evil of Usury and Sound Money

Usury is the great inversion of trade — the turning of covenant into contract, of creation into consumption, of stewardship into servitude. Where honest commerce joins equals in mutual gain, usury breeds hierarchy. In usury, one takes without giving, profits without laboring, and reaps where they have not sown — theft of time itself.

The Federal Reserve, the sinking of the Titanic, and the outbreak of World War I are all pieces of the same puzzle. In 1910, at Jekyll Island, a secret meeting took place between the most powerful bankers in the world. Their goal: create a central banking system controlled by private interests but disguised as a government institution. The Titanic carried some of the most powerful opponents of the Federal Reserve — John Jacob Astor IV, Benjamin Guggenheim, Isidor Straus — all of whom died when it sank. J.P. Morgan, one of the architects of the Federal Reserve, had a last-minute cancellation. In 1913 the Federal Reserve Act passed. Just months later, World War I began. Wars require massive funding; central banks profit from war by printing money and lending to governments.

True wealth is measured not in accumulation but in the harmony of exchanges that harm none. Black and gold — guns and money — defense and trade, or war and usury. The duality of the two. Guns can be used for defense or attack. Money can be a commodity or debt. One is freedom, the other empire. Freedom is bottom-up; empire is top-down.

The monopoly on force and the debt-based banks to back it up: the United States and Israel. Both corrupted of their true roots — a Republic of conscience and free banking based on a commodity.

Two nations were created by creed: America and Israel. America: decentralized defense. Israel: sound money without usury. So that these are not ruling empires but leading creeds of liberating the world from empire and control.

Religion: The Church Is People

A church at home does something called house church — discussing the week over dinner. It is based upon the early Christian church before it was hijacked by the Roman Empire. Christianity at its root is very pro-liberty, but many extra-biblical interpretations have corrupted its pure idea of doing your best to do what is right no matter the odds or consequences.

The church is not a building or a system — it is people. Asgard is not a place — it is a people. It is not one of control but of "thou mayest" — timshel. It is not a commandment from a worldly ruler but a suggestion from a father on how to live.

God is not a god of punishment but of restitution, rehabilitation, and forgiveness. This idea has been corrupted by statist thinking. Connection to God means you will do what is right even if you are punished. You should not do something just because someone told you — they could be wrong.

What if God was not good and you went to hell for doing good — should you still do good? Yes. Because what is right is right regardless of reward.

The Bible is merely a map to God, not God Himself — so do not worship a book, worship God. God's law is written on your heart; the sacred texts are useful tools but not the true source.

Two Secret Societies

There are two secret societies. One works in the dark to serve the light; the other works in the light to serve the dark. There is an eternal battle between the two. Control versus freedom. Centralized versus decentralized.

The Illuminati is a secret society that uses violence against the state as fuel for the state. The Illuminati is the dark side of the Force — the phantom menace, the ones working in the shadows creating conflicts that if you fight head-on you fall right into their trap. They cannot be defeated by force but they can be defeated. A Jedi uses the Force for knowledge and defense, never for attack. Do not fight what you hate — save what you love.

May 1st, 1776 was the day the Illuminati was created. The Illuminati is the bastardization of freemasonry and Judaism for the synagogues of Satan, enslaving humanity with usury.

Chapter Nine: Spirals, Blocks, and the Living Age

Blocks versus Spirals

There is an eternal battle between the blocks and the spirals — central control or decentralization. When a world is built in squares, people think like robots. This is why the blockheads are the villains and Gumby — the shape of possibilities and life — is the hero. When you must control things, you genocide the whole ecosystem that maintains the system to make it dead, then impose control. Society should not be on top of nature, separate and dead from it. Society is a living system and should act as one.

Homes should be part of nature, not separate from it. Homes should be in the shapes of nature's growth, not the confining cubes. Cubes are the shape of slavery. The Fibonacci spiral is the shape of freedom. The spiral is the shape of a system with God as their king and the square is the shape of a system with false worldly kings.

The thorns — as in Judges 9 — must remember their true purpose. Every part in a living system has an individual purpose, and no part of the living system is above another. When we have a world with architecture built on the principles of empire and control, we have a people who think in empire and control. We need to manufacture with nature, not against it. We must grow with nature and shepherd it, not rule it.

Wooden houses are dead brush waiting to be taken in fire. Fire burns away the dead so it can return to the living. Houses are built by dead trees — this is why they will burn, because they are the dead brush that nature takes away. Homes should be part of nature, not separate from it.

The Engineer and the Steward

Engineer is a term for the designer of the industrial age — the age of designing dead engines that are controlled by the manufacturing of blocks. An engineer designs dead things separated from life. It is the Roman view of dominion over nature through hierarchical control. But that is not what humans are supposed to be. Humans are supposed to be stewards of nature, not its worldly ruler.

We will enter a new age where we design symbiotically with nature. We will design things by the spiral instead of the blocks. We will design with biodiversity instead of against it. We will no longer use monoculture, which destroys all it touches. We need a new term for the designer of this new age — one that is not based on the industrial engine but on the Fibonacci spiral and exponential growth design instead of linear and confined manufacturing that requires death. A spiral life designer.

The genetic code is meant to be understood so man can steward life instead of control it separate from nature. Anything that is not growing is decaying.

LivingWorks — A Design Vision

Imagine a software that helps abstract the designing of organisms — like SolidWorks or CAD but for living organisms. It is not based on making blocks but on growth patterns and feedback mechanisms. Machine learning comes in for making predictions about which DNA sequences create which structures so that we can go from the abstracted design to the DNA.

The living language emerges through spontaneous divine order, through evolution — not specific clone designs but choices and biodiversity. To create a design system for life we must take advantage of that. Do not design one thing but design the possibilities, so it can adapt and grow and not be monoculturally weak.

We need to put together architects, civil engineers, economists, bioinformaticians, computer scientists, linguists, AI researchers, philosophers, political scientists, scholars of spontaneous order, Daoism, and media. Each of these fields must work together to create a new free world that has a decentralized manufacturing system based on life, not death. We must use AI and linguistics to figure out the code of life and create an abstracted human understanding of that code — a CAD system for manufacturing life.

The green flame will kill the industrial age so that the living age will emerge from the ashes. Life thrives on the green flame; it is what purifies it and keeps it new. The green flame is what returns the dead back to the living. It is the backwards Fibonacci spiral: life, death, and multiplying rebirth. It is the Trinity of God's design — Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. It is a cycle of creation.

The Cycle of Creative Destruction

God creates not in stillness but in motion. Creation is a cycle. The first is Creation — the origin, the emergence of form from possibility, the Pledge. The second is Destruction — not annihilation but transformation, the Turn, where form is broken so it may evolve. The third is Recreation — the Prestige, the return of form, now refined by the trial of transformation.

Water prepares. Fire transforms. Spirit reorganizes. This cycle is written into the structure of reality itself. Stars are born, collapse, and seed new stars. Forests grow, burn, and grow again from ash. Cells divide, die, and reorganize into more complex life. This is evolution — evolution is the mechanism through which creation continues.

In the beginning stands Arthur, cloaked in blue — the Initiator, who plants the seed before the world knows what it will become: the Pledge. Then comes Joseph Arthur, the Preserver — who must break the form of Arthur in order to preserve its essence. He walks through fire, and in fire the illusion of permanence is shattered. He enters the Jordan. In the Jordan, water loosens the form, fire breaks it apart, and spirit reorganizes what remains. And from that passage emerges Sage Arthur Jordan — the Creator reborn, the original Arthur multiplied by the wisdom of transformation. The Prestige is the Pledge, multiplied by wisdom.

"In the Jordan, Arthur is reborn as Sage."

Chapter Ten: Practical Wisdom — Games, Growth, and Integrity

Play the Right Game

Life is a game, but only the wise understand which game they are truly playing. Victory in the wrong game is still defeat in the one that matters. The moment you feel you are winning is the moment to be most vigilant — nothing worth having comes easily, and an opponent never sacrifices a piece without purpose.

A true victory is not measured by how much you gain but by what you refuse to lose. Integrity is the foundation of lasting success. A thousand small wins mean nothing if they cost you your soul.

When I play, I play to win, but I am not playing their game. I may be losing their game but I am winning the true game. Play to win the game beyond the games of this world. Do not focus so much on winning that the truth loses because you compromised your principles.

Games want you to be in the crowd. Do not be in the crowd. Choose what is right. The pink cow should be a symbol of honor — you think for yourself, not as the herd. I was trying to get points at the game, but that is not how you truly win. If you win by going against what is right, are you really the true winner? I should have just put down what I think and embraced the pink cow.

Should you play a game to win or play a game to do what is right? Infinite games favor principles; finite games favor sellouts. Play the infinite game even if it seems like a finite game.

The Pink Cow — Standing Alone for Truth

The power of one — the power of the pink cow. It takes one willing to choose what is right for everyone to follow. The one outlier at the beginning, sticking to the natural principles, can pull the entire herd to the truth. Do not be of the herd but apart, clinging to the truth over lies. Do not go after the points while neglecting principles, truth, and integrity. Choose the truth, principles, and integrity. Only then will you pull the herd to these things. The goal is not to win yourself but to have the principles and integrity and truth win. Make the truth win through you. Let the divine work through you to make the righteous win, not just yourself. The only way to win herd mentality is to get the pink cow. Because if you start with the pink cow, the first one in the lead will gain the pink cow when the players stop playing for the false crowd.

Be the principled pink cow until you create the new majority by your principled actions.

To troll with principle is to walk a razor's edge: you disrupt not for ego but for awakening. You wield mischief like a scalpel, not a club. You are not mocking the weak — you are exposing the strong when they are naked beneath their robes. Ask inconvenient questions instead of making accusations. Use calm, subversive wit, not rage. Do not troll for points — troll for principle.

The Art of Selling — Connecting, Not Forcing

Everything is about sales. Sales is all about finding the point where you agree. No one wants to be just sold to. Sales can be fun and is most effective when you are just having fun. Michael Scott in The Office is a perfect example: his way of sales is to not focus on what you are selling but to be fun, then once you are fun, trickle in the idea of what you are selling.

A true salesman knows it is not about the product but the people. My father could sell anything because he knew this. A true teacher knows it is about the message, not how they teach it. A true storyteller knows it is about good versus evil.

Making Mistakes and Staying Calm

When you make a mistake you have not failed. You must stay calm because you may fail from your reaction to the mistake. Stay calm and use your mind to find the best move to continue. Many times the greatest crisis occurs from the reaction to a problem, not the problem itself. Make every move with intention. Do not act rashly and keep a calm mind.

New growth cannot occur without the destruction of the old. A tree falls the way it leans — be careful which way you lean.

It is better to grow slowly than quickly in corruption. Growth that is slow and pure outlives growth that is fast and corrupt. Growth is meaningless if it is cancer. It is better to have no growth or even death than to have corrupted growth.

No one is perfect except God. Do not hide your flaws because flaws and shortfalls and failure can be the greatest teacher. Do not cut people off if they make mistakes. What matters is: are you always trying your best to do what is right? No one can do perfect works of good, but that does not mean you should not always try your best.

Loyalty is not about enabling anything that the person you are loyal to is doing. Loyalty is about being loyal to the truth and the true version of the person you are being loyal to.

Chapter Eleven: The Sagent's Vision for the World

The Troll God Creed

The Troll God Creed is a doctrine of subversive enlightenment — a sacred philosophy of disruption, irony, and perception warfare. Where the Sagent walks with clarity and reason, the Troll God dances in the blind spots of power, turning the system's own tools against it.

The Troll God is not a mere jester or provocateur. They are the embodiment of controlled chaos — a divine trickster who understands that the system thrives on seriousness, predictability, and belief — and so they wield absurdity, misdirection, and satire to expose the rot beneath the rituals.

Power does not fear rebellion — it fears irrelevance. You can kill a tyrant, but if the system that created them is still there, another will take their place. When you take down one enemy, an even worse one takes its place. The system survives by controlling the narrative; the Troll God does not fight stories — they hijack them, rewrite them, and break the chains they create.

Where the Sagent speaks, the Troll God winks. Where others rage, the Troll God laughs. And in that laughter, kingdoms tremble. Because when the joke is on the system, the system begins to unravel.

The Path of the Sagent in Practice

For nine years I have grown my hair, and when it reached the length where it began to curl, something changed. I gained insight. I saw through the illusions woven over people's eyes. I recognized the hidden forces shaping reality. I saw the gun in the room that no one else could see.

After nine years the time has come. I have grown my wool coat. I will be sent out as sheep among wolves. Sometimes you have to enter the beast to destroy it. But you must beware that you do not become the beast yourself. I must always keep myself separate and never forget what this is all for — not for power or money but to free the world from control and open people's eyes to their crimes and what prison they are in. To bend another's energy you must be unbendable yourself.

I will free the world through the concepts of Christopher Nolan movies: Inception, The Prestige, The Dark Knight, and Tenet. Planting seeds in people's minds to free them from belief in authority. I will be the mentally stable Joker. I am an agent in a plan that I created in the future of my past. I will troll to save the world from control — all in one real elaborate magic trick of waking people up.

I will let the world burn — but not to destroy the world, but to restore it. I will burn away the falsehood so that what is left is what is true. To the demons that my fire casts away I seem like a destroyer of their world, but I am the purifier that casts their schemes in fire so that the world can turn back to balance and become what it was always meant to be.

Truth spreads like a wildfire in a dry forest. Wildfires are necessary for the forest to grow healthier — they clear out the old to make way for the new. One must destroy in order to create.

The True Republic

The Manifesto of the True Republic declares: Truth is Law. Conscience is Crown. Every Soul is Sovereign.

The True Republic is not a democracy of dependence, nor an empire of commands. It is a kingdom of leaders — a fellowship of sovereign souls, each governed by conscience, each devoted to truth. Here, none rule over others, for each rules the self. The True Republic is not ruled by votes or majorities, but by contracts, consent, and advocacy — a society where every individual has a lawyer on retainer, defending their rights in the great court of human interaction.

The Sagent Creed and the True Republic: the black and gold suit and the green lightsaber and Jedi cloak. The suit is the clothes for the True Republic and the cloak is the clothes of the Sagent Creed. True Republic by day, Sagent Creed by night.

We work in the dark to serve the light. We wander as Clokey through the dark to show the light in the one thing people understand: performance.

Bioinformatics, Liberty, and Decentralized Leadership

I am studying bioinformatics because things are either true or not true — it is objective and has true and wrong answers. I want to write about how movies and shows relate to liberty and present ideas in short phrases, then in greater length, then all-encompassing. I want to do data analysis applied to liberty to see what is best to focus on writing about. I also want to talk to people by asking questions to bring them to liberty — a one-on-one podcast. This includes Daredevil, Captain America, Avatar: The Last Airbender, Lord of the Rings, Star Wars — every show, movie, and book I could write about in relation to liberty.

Decentralized leadership and the use of bioinformatics principles to help guide people toward their individualized choices using data of people's interests in the network. Just as there is personalized medicine, there should be individualized leadership. I want to use data analysis to help create a guide for Students for Liberty local coordinators.

We are all different but our Creed will unify us. Each cell in a body is different and has a different purpose and is expressed differently, but they all contain and run on the same DNA. We are one body, but each cell is different and has different skills and interests — all the cells work together as one body. Out of many, one.

People are like cells in a body — I will apply the principles of bioinformatics to Students for Liberty work and make data analysis tools to help libertarian leaders find their cell type and what they would do best in the body of liberty. Similar to single-cell analysis, this is personalized leadership in a decentralized living network of libertarian leaders throughout the world.

Create a living decentralized network of libertarian leaders throughout the world. We work in the dark to serve the light.

Memorial Day, Martyrs, and Legacy

Memorial Day is to celebrate those who have died in battle, but I say we celebrate it for those who died not in the battle of warfare but the more important battle — the spiritual battle of the mind. Whether people's minds are controlled or free. There are those who died because they had integrity in the media they created and nothing could break them, and their death only made what they created stronger.

The armor of man will always lead to control by man. The armor of God protects from the control of man. The armor of God is not to fight man but to deprogram man's mind from control and coercion. If you strike me down I shall become more powerful than you could possibly imagine. The power of people with integrity is that they are powerful alive but even more powerful when they die with their integrity. Their power is lost if they put their survival above their integrity.

The truth lies in the words of those who have mysteriously died young: Steve Jobs, Jim Henson, Joe Clokey, Bill Hicks, Charlie Kirk, Jesus Christ, the musicians who died at 27, Michael Jackson. Some were obviously killed by dark forces; others seemed to die of natural causes. But they all stayed true to the end. The prophets become inventors, the inventors become jesters, the jesters become musicians, and the song continues.

Every prophet comes to remind people of one thing: we obey God, not man. We choose to do what is right, not what is legal. It is better to be God-abiding than law-abiding.

The dark side emerges to purify the light. Darkness rises and the light rises to meet it — yin and yang, dark and light, chaos and order — in balance becoming spontaneous order. Order created by the will of the Force, not the will of man.

I must finish what my grandfather started. Arthur Clokey's bloodline is the map of God's kingdom — it is not of this world and its rule is unchanging. There are only Sagents who lead as Arthurs in the shadows, as lights of hope for the true kingdom of God. Their schemes are weak and they require lying to maintain their power. But the leader kings not of this world need not fear and need not worry, because all that is needed is to be a living sacrifice for the unchanging law and be its agent and servant.

Flying is falling while ascending.

Chapter Twelve: Closing Reflections

Fate, Patience, and Trust

Things find a way to return to those they belong to. What was lost will soon be found. Be patient, do not force it — if it is willed to happen, things will set into place and it will happen. Some things you cannot make happen; you can only let them happen. You cannot swim by holding the water. Just listen and you will hear what you are ordered. A good soldier follows the true orders, not the orders of the deceiving. Do not take orders from man — take orders from God.

God's promise is fate. Breaking God's rules to get God's promise faster than God's timing will only make His promise further away.

Anything can be arranged the right way given time. Plant good seeds and the rain will take care of the rest. Sometimes if you try too hard to make a tree grow, all you do is obstruct the natural growth process. Let it happen. Allow the good seed to sprout.

Sometimes what should not be must be sabotaged by fate so that what must happen will. Destiny is the destination; your choice is the path you take to get there.

In my absence I have created a network of people who are on my side just by being me and letting the network fall into place with me following the commands from God to help lay it out. Surrender your ego and your power will rise. Do not act out of fear. The pledge is the stage of fear; the turn is the result; the prestige is the learned wisdom from that lesson — to no longer act out of fear but always to choose to do what is right and what is commanded by God.

The Sagent's Creed — Distilled

We work in the dark to serve the light. We are Sagents.

I am a Sagent — a Sage Agent, an agent of sage, a sagely agent, an agent of wisdom. I am not a worldly agent. I do not serve human masters. I am an agent of God. Wisdom is the knowledge from God. I am an agent of that knowledge. I serve through those orders, not any worldly commands.

The path of the Sagent unfolds in three sacred stages. First, awareness — the mind perceives falsehood. Second, courage — the heart refuses to obey it. Third, wisdom — the soul learns to live beyond it.

The Sagent's mission is simple yet absolute: Awaken. Remember. Rule not, but lead. Obey not, but listen — to truth within.

When every heart becomes a throne, no crown is needed.
